ABOUT TASHA

Tasha is a dedicated single mother from San Marcos who pours her energy into teaching, coaching, and serving her community. When Austin Habitat for Humanity began construction on her home, she made the bold decision to return to school, all while raising her children and completing her sweat equity hours. She closed on her home in the summer of 2023.

More than two years later, Tasha and her children are thriving. The stability and safety of their Austin Habitat home have given them space to grow, and in Fall 2025, she earned her master's from Texas State University, a milestone that reflects her determination and resilience.

Homeownership creates lasting stability, strengthens families, and opens the door to generational opportunity. By supporting Austin Habitat, you can help more families like Tasha's achieve the security, independence, and hope that come with owning a home. Your investment makes this life-changing impact possible.
